Why?? By Carol Winter

I really enjoy the Millennium Trail but sometimes there are groups of men drinking along the river who make me feel uncomfortable. Why can't they stay home and drink in their own yards and leave the Trail for people who like to walk and enjoy nature. ~ Nervous Nellie

Dear Nellie

The people you are seeing probably live in dilapidated rooming houses with virtually no yard space and no common rooms. When they want to socialize with friends they are no longer allowed to drink in public parks.

Apparently the banks of waterways are federal land so these are about the only public spaces where people can enjoy a beer without breaking municipal by-laws. Usually these people are just enjoying a good time with friends -- an opportunity which many of us can enjoy at our own homes or cottages.

The trails are for the enjoyment of all, and during the day, they are very safe. However, if you are walking alone, especially after dark, you would be wise to take well-lit routes even if they are longer.
